
##The Introduction It's 2013. You wake up in the morning, and you find your keyboard, mouse, and monitor are all empty of power. It's just a computer blackout - no big deal. But then you notice that your phone isn't working either - you're having a power outage! And then somebody mentions that there are reports of people who can't get into their houses because they have keyless locks on their doors. Suddenly the world is looking bleak...

Reception was negative, with several critics calling it "the worst film ever made". "Lockout" was released on DVD and Blu-ray in the UK on 13 December 2010. The Blu-ray release includes a making of documentary, a video commentary by director Christophe Gans and stars Guy Pearce and Maggie Q along with a trailer. The film has received negative reviews from various critics, who called it "the worst film ever made". The film grossed $14,311,967 in the US and Canada, against a budget of $30 million, but due to negative publicity surrounding Guy Pearce's performance (and the reports that he had insisted on using hair product to appear bald), it did not make its budget back. As a result, it is considered a major box office flop. In total, the film grossed $30,708,585 worldwide. "Lockout" was nominated in four categories for the 2012 Golden Raspberry Awards, including Worst Actor (Guy Pearce), Worst Director (Christophe Gans), Worst Screenplay and Worst Picture, but lost all four to "Battleship".
