Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a liquid crystal display, and more particularly to a backlight unit of a liquid crystal display (LCD) having an improved structure for stably directing light uniformly over an entire area of the LCD. 2. Description of the Related Art A liquid crystal display (LCD) is a display device which uses the light transmittance characteristics of a liquid crystal layer disposed between two substrates. Since liquid crystal has no memory capability, it is necessary to supply a power to the LCD when displaying a predetermined image thereon. The backlight unit (BLU) of the LCD is provided for this purpose. Referring to FIGS. 1 to 4, a conventional BLU includes a light emitting diode (LED) driving circuit 10, a source electrode drive circuit 12, a data source for driving data lines and a gate electrode drive circuit 14. Also, the BLU includes a plurality of cold cathode fluorescent lamps (CCFLs) 20, 22, 24. The LED driving circuit 10 includes a plurality of LED driving chips 11 and the source electrode drive circuit 12 includes a plurality of source electrode drive chips 13. Also, the gate electrode drive circuit 14 includes a plurality of gate electrode drive chips 15. Each of the LED driving chips 11 is located between the adjacent two CCFLs 20, 22, 24. The LED driving chips 11, 13 of the source electrode drive circuit 12 and the gate electrode drive chips 15 of the gate electrode drive circuit 14 are electrically connected to each other via an interconnection line (ICL), the data lines DL for supplying data, and the power supply source Vcc. Referring to FIG. 2, each of the LED driving chips 11 includes a Zener diode DZ1, a plurality of LED's LD1, LD2, LD3 and LD4, and a plurality of Zener diodes DZ
