Is it for a child who is arrogant or conceited? A: AIP stands for Artistic Impression and has a different meaning from A.I.P. in the question. AIP and A.I.P. are common ways of referring to a particular painting style which was popular during the Victorian era. AIP is literally translated as Artistic Impression and refers to the overall effect that the artist achieves while completing a painting. A.I.P. is the artist's initials. Thus we could say A.I.P. is for an artist who has a certain style and personality. The letters AI after the artist's initials stand for the artist's initials, i.e. "AA" = Angelo Acciaoli. Severe sales losses at the Royal Academy led to a reformation of the Royal Academy of Arts in 1868. The new chairman of the exhibition committee, Henry Cole, was a big supporter of A.I.P. and other artistic personalities, and this was later to be a major influence on members of the other major art schools.
