A unique interdisciplinary treatment approach for drug abuse involving the combination of drug abuse education, skills development, and family counseling has been developed by our Division. The approach is characterized by an extended time period (4-8 months) of counseling and education provided over a 16- to 20-week period and requires intensive participation by the patient and his or her family. The extensive counseling, which includes psychotherapy, educational, and motivational techniques, is facilitated in an unstructured and nonspecific manner. The goal of this treatment is to change attitudes, values, and behaviors related to drug abuse. This goal is achieved through an extended, relatively nonspecific counseling and teaching process. Data collected in a 3-year project completed for our Division indicate that, for this population, the extended interdisciplinary approach is effective in reducing the incidence and severity of drug use and related problems.Sunday, April 20, 2009 Just listen to me. I feel like I'm having a mental breakdown. I just feel so negative. I've been trying so hard to be positive but I can't get past my self-pity. I keep going over it and over it in my mind. There is so much negativity in me. It's like I'm born to be a grump. I don't know where it all comes from. I'm so frustrated with myself because I'm blaming so many people, but I'm not talking about anyone in particular. I'm talking about the human race in general. And I'm going to blame myself because that's what you do when you have a mental breakdown. I know I sound like a spoiled child but I am not. I am a very caring person. I love my friends, family, and animals. I am a giving person. I feel so terrible for putting these burdens on them. I feel like a huge burden on everyone. I can't be around people because I keep talking about things I'm upset about. I know I sound crazy. I'm a very neurotic person and this is just who I am. My father is the most obnoxious man I know. If I just had more of the father I need, I wouldn't be so bitter. I know there's nothing I can do about it. It's my mental breakdown. I feel really low. I'm emotionally flat. I just
