I drove to the airport, passing countless Bed and Breakfasts, quaint museums, and cute shops and restaurants. When I reached the airport, I had just over an hour to finish packing and preparing my belongings for my flight. Time is short in Arizona. At 5:42 am the minute hand on my cellphone flew past the zero mark. I spent an hour packing for a trip with no clear plan, no research, no guidebooks, and only a hazy understanding of the city I was entering. I pulled into the airport parking lot at around 9:30 am. As I packed the last of my belongings, I thought about how disconnected I felt. Arizona, an area filled with natural beauty and historic discoveries, and I had no idea what to expect. I could only guess at the amazing things to come. What Arizona doesn't expect The first thing I noticed as I stepped out of the taxi was the heat. It was hot. For the first time since arriving in the United States, I was walking in a very hot and humid climate. I was wearing a wool cardigan, which was long, but not long enough to cover my jeans. I wore tennis shoes. I walked to the counter and asked for directions to the airport taxi and off I went. I was happy, but not happy enough to ask for directions or to take a map, but I needed to know I was headed in the right direction. My taxi arrived at Sedona Airport. I had been there before, but this was by far the most difficult time to get through the maze of baggage claim. I had to choose which security checkpoint I'd go through, to make sure I went through the correct 09e8f5149f
