Prospective analysis of traumatic injuries in equine athletes over 4 years. Equine athletes are subject to a significant risk of traumatic injury. A prospective study was carried out to analyse the incidence, nature and severity of trauma sustained by horses competing in eventing, vaulting, eventing and showjumping. The horses were included prospectively over four equestrian disciplines. Six hundred and thirty-four horses from 162 competing groups participated over four years, giving a total of 3094 horse-hours. Eighty-nine horses were euthanized during the study period for reasons unrelated to trauma. There were 575 accidents, with an average of 1.53 per horse. The mean injury rate was 0.64 per horse-hour. The majority of injuries were to the head, neck, shoulder and abdomen. Seven horses sustained lacerations and five fractures of the limbs (two forelimb, two hindlimb, one carpus and one metacarpal). Thirty-nine horses were euthanized, the majority for reasons unrelated to trauma or for infection. Trauma was the most common cause of death with a significant relationship with age (P 0.05). The majority of injuries occurred during training and showed that training alone does not account for the high incidence of injury.
