Bing Map Superget is an intuitive application that enables you to view the world map, using the Bing service, then select areas from it and download them to your computer. The software is capable of extracting maps and images contained in the particular piece of map you have selected. Find any city in the world The software requires Internet connection, in order to display an up-to-date image of the world map, that you can zoom in on. Thus, you can view the continents and oceans, then zoom in and observe state borders, cities and roads. You can use the rectangular and polygonal selection tools, in order to capture a specific area on the map, in a square shape or outline a state's borders. The software also enables you to search a particular city or place, by entering its name or coordinates. The software supports the latitude and longitude type of measuring. Additionally, if you are looking for a large city or a capital, you may select it, if available from the list of preset destinations. Reliable download manager Depending on the area that you select on the map, you can download data and images associated to the region you chose. The integrated download manager allows you to check if the coordinates coincide to the area you wish to download, then specify the destination folder and the name of the task. Each task features multiple download levels. Thus, lower levels include less information and pictures, while superior levels offer you up to millions of images, depending on the size of the selected area. Additionally, higher levels imply larger images, better printing quality and larger file sizes. Monitor downloading tasks The software can batch download areas of the world map and allows you to monitor the progression of each item. You can view the number of kilobytes being transferred in real time, as well as the download percentage. A tree structure on the side of the download manager enables you to view the tasks, based on their status: finished, suspended, scheduled or on-going downloads.
