The Crayon Cannon was designed to look exactly like a real world gun. The player clicks on the screen and a fiery projectile of Crayons is fired from the machine, destroying the gray Crayons and scoring points. The Crayon Cannon is not a normal gun in any way. It's unlike any gun ever seen in video games. Instead of pulling a handle, a black keypad with white keys is used to fire the Crayons. As you can see in the Game Graphics Overview picture, the Crayon Cannon fires from the left, and you can only fire once every five seconds. Starting with Game Version 3.0, each shot from the Crayon Cannon has 3 different levels of power. A low power, mid power, and a high power. These are the powers in which you use the keys. To increase your power, hold down the A button. To lower the power, hold down the B button. The player can change the number of

Crayons shot by pressing either of the A and B keys. Holding down both the A and B keys allows the player to shoot a larger number of Crayons. Pressing the A button also locks in that number of Crayons and the player cannot change it. The player can also change the speed of the projectiles. The default settings are slow but the player can speed up the projectiles by pressing either the C or D keys. To fire the Crayons, the player must be near the gray "emitter" boxes. If the player is too far from an emitter, a second key, the N key, will fire a blue emitter. In Game Version 2.6, the Crayon Cannon shot Crayons of varying colors. The player can change the color of the Crayons by pressing the I, J, or K keys. The Crayon Cannon in its first form of Game Version 1.0 has five different settings. A power level of High, Mid, Normal, Low, or Custom. A speed level of Fast, Normal, or Slow. A color level of Red, Blue, Green, Orange, Purple, or Random. The player can adjust each setting by pressing the Z, X, C, V, or M keys. The Crayon Cannon used in the first Crayon Cannon Version 1.0 can be acquired in the Arcade. The Crayon Cannon can be given as a present by

The player uses Crayon Cannon, a simple C64 "party game", to shoot a ball out of a cannon. It is a game where the player's objective is to increase the number of points scored in the Goal area, within a time limit. Points are earned by blasting the ball into the goal, and the points you score are added to your score. Points are earned by blasting into the goal, as well as from hitting or passing the ball into other parts of the playfield. There is also a machine which can fire the ball back, to those who hit it. In Crayon Cannon, the machine is called the Stinger, and it can shoot the ball back to the player. It can also be "awakened" from the sleep mode, in which it is idle. The player can also fire the ball back into the stinger. The player begins by firing the ball into the "goals". There are five goals, numbered 1-5. Every goal is named and, if the ball is in that goal, the player is awarded an increasing number of points, depending on the goal. It all goes like this: 1 point: Goal number 1 2 points: Goal number 2 3 points: Goal number 3 4 points: Goal number 4 5 points: Goal number 5 Then, in the space for score of the

Crayon Cannon, the player adds his or her score, since when the ball is in the goal, the score is not added to the player's score. The score can be set to a minimum or maximum value, depending on the player's wishes. Then, the player can fire the ball back into the Stinger, or into other parts of the playfield. This is why it is a party game. When the player hits the ball into the stinger, the Stinger will fire it back to the player again. The ball will automatically be fired back from the Stinger to the player when the ball is shot into one of the other parts of the playfield, or from the ball into the goal. When the ball is fired back into the Stinger, if the player's score is less than the total possible points, then the Stinger will wake up. The game ends when the time limit is up, 1d6a3396d6
