Linux Ubuntu Sound Scheme Crack

A very cool little project to make Ubuntu look more like Windows XP. This involves using GNOME theme folders in the application folder to merge styles. You can install this in Ubuntu easily. To install just search for software in Ubuntu Software Center and search for Menu Previews. Install the package and reboot. Once you reboot it will be a good idea to check out the other themes you can install using this theme. How to install: It can be a hassle to repair the system by removing an application installed in a Linux based system. You can always remove the applications using aptitude (the application manager). For Debian based systems this is a very useful tool, however it still requires aptitude. `sudo aptitude purge packagename` The packagename may not always be an easy thing to remember. To make it easier you can install a Synaptic Package Navigator. `sudo apt-get install synaptic` After installing the synaptic package you will be able to use the command: `sudo synaptic` The synaptic package may take a few minutes to install and configure. It may even ask you to restart your system. Don't press the configure button. Simply press the reload button, once the update manager is done a window will open and display the installation progress. Once the installation is done, you can close the Synaptic Package Navigator and you can open a terminal and verify the status of the installation. It should be fine. `sudo synaptic` If everything is fine the Synaptic Package Navigator should open a window and tell you that the application is installed. `sudo synaptic` For a clean install you should use this: `sudo apt-get install synaptic` That should do it. How to remove this application: Fedora 3 or higher users can install the RPM2DEB package, and it will produce the DEB package; Install the tar package by downloading it from the download page: `$ cd rpm2deb-2007.02.25-1.1.tar.gz` `./install.sh` If you are using xmms2 package, do the following: `$ cd xmms2-2.7.0.3-1.i586.rpm` `$ rpm2cpio xmms2-2.7.0.3-1.i586.rpm | cpio -id` `$ cd xmms2-2.7.0.3-`
