In the code below I've added some spaces to the divs. But I want to add the spaces only in between the middle-left and the middle-right div (not between the two outer divs). So I guess I have to use something like $('#main > div:nth-child(3n+3)').each(function(n, el) { $(el).append(" "); }) This is what I've tried so far, but I don't know where I have to place the braces to get it working... Also it looks bad in Firefox. A: This seems pretty simple: $('#main > div:nth-of-type(3n+1)').each(function() { $(this).append(" "); }); Example: Q: Redirect to URL with an extension in the URL I'm using ASP.NET Core MVC to create a UI that requires users to login. When I redirect to a Login controller (the default one created) I want to pass to it not only the identity of the user, but also the page the user is coming from. Thus I'd like to be able to redirect to something like: www.mywebpage.com/mypage, and retain the portion after mypage so I can build up the login page in the controller. The only documentation I can find suggests I can do that with routing, but I cannot find a way to configure it to route mydomain.com/mypage to LoginController. Alternatively, I could just redirect to the login page, but I'd prefer to not do that, as it's not the redirect that's actually going to be happening. The other approach I thought of was to redirect to the URL and then check the url in the OnGetAsync() method 3e33713323
