Accumark 8.3 is the industry-standard software for marking and trimming garments such as this American Apparel t-shirt. The invention relates to a device for counting articles and comprising a housing having at least one article input and at least one article input, and having first and second conveying paths through which the articles are conveyed from the first input to the second input, wherein the first and second conveying paths comprise at least one vehicle driven along the conveying paths. Such devices for counting articles are known e.g. from DE 10 2011 055 998 A1 or from DE 10 2009 015 853 A1. In these devices for counting articles, at least one holding device is configured as article input. This article input serves to perform a test of at least one article and is thereby responsible for the loading of the counted articles into an output unit. The article is seized in the holding device by gripping, with the aid of static friction, a larger part of the article, and by closing the holding device it is possible to load the article into the output unit. To unload the article from the holding device, the holding device is opened. In a conventional device for counting articles, it is possible to provide additional article inputs, which leads to a further article input. The additional article inputs are constructed such that the holding devices of the additional article inputs are moved by a common actuation unit to and from the conveying paths and to the article inputs of the other article input. In this case, the actuation unit typically moves the holding devices automatically via a synchronous movement, which may be caused by a transporting vehicle, in particular a circulation vehicle. The

With yet another report on the deficit claiming that there will be no money left in the bank come March if we do nothing to prevent the situation from worsening, some may have a difficult time looking at saving money this Christmas. But this month would be a good time to look at new ways to save money on gifts, presents and festive food that will be on people's minds later in the month. Myriad new rewards and offers are circulating right now, so it's important that you take time out to think about the best way to spend your money. Besides the obvious savings to be made through negotiating purchases, there are a number of offers and rewards that can be enjoyed this Christmas. Toys R Us is offering a range of savings on toys this month. There are 20 deals to choose from and if you are buying in a store, you could save as much as £92. And if you aren't buying in a store, you can save up to £80 through the online catalogue, which is also available in stores from November 1. But that is the name of the game this month, because if there is one thing toys are good for, it is saving money and, this time of year, this is certainly one of the best ways to do it. So how can we squeeze out more savings? We all shop around for the best deals, which is why online shopping is so great. But, with all the fantastic rewards for online shopping, it's easy to spend more than you have planned. Sometimes you just make a mistake and end up with items that you don't need or are of inferior quality, just because you didn't look into the quality of the products. 570a42141b
