If you have a regular USB flash drive or external hard drive and wish to have it be automatically mounted whenever you connect it to your computer, you can use the AutoMount application. It works with all currently available operating systems, including Windows XP/Vista/7 and Mac OS X. Unlike other programs of this type, AutoMount is designed to be both easy to use and versatile. It can be scheduled to perform the mounting and unmounting process at scheduled times and when certain events occur. Easily manage USB devices The program's main window features a list of all connected USB devices. You can search through the list using various options, such as by name or disk number. The USB devices are then displayed in a tree view and you can add them to custom groups, with each group displaying the files stored on the connected device. You can set the application to perform a certain action when a USB device is connected or unmounted. You can choose from various options, such as displaying a message, launching a shell script, or ejecting the connected device. You can also set it to be automatically mounted at startup, or when the computer reboots. You can even choose to have the applications that are currently opened close and reopen the device. Enables you to browse files on a connected USB device AutoMount also lets you browse files on the connected USB device. It displays the files on the connected device in a tree view. You can also perform actions on the files, such as copy, move or delete them. If the files are images, you can open them in their associated programs. Moreover, you can change the displayed files and folders. You can also add, remove or change the device groups. It is also possible to exclude certain folders or devices from being displayed. AutoMount includes a configuration tool for settings and scheduled actions. The application is designed to be both simple to use and very versatile. Automatic USB device mounting and unmounting is also very easy to configure. AutoMount Description: If you need a tool to help you manage your Internet-connected devices, you should try GroupWise Remote Access. It lets you access a remote machine from your computer and control the remote machine's functions using a keyboard or mouse. The remote machine can be a Windows or Linux machine, running the GroupWise program. You can even set it up to display a separate window in your default browser. Even if you do

The aim of the present study was to determine the prevalence of goitre and identify its association with nutritional factors in the schoolchildren of Al-Madinah city, Saudi Arabia. The study was conducted in the 2nd grade and 4th grade of the primary schools, randomly selected, from the city of Al-Madinah, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. The study was carried out in the urban region of Al-Madinah. The total number of schoolchildren studied was 829, ages 6-15 years. Anthropometric and dietary survey was conducted in selected schools. Data were collected on general information, socioeconomic factors, nutritional habits, anthropometry and diet. A stratified multistage random sampling technique was used. The chi2 test was used to assess the association between goitre and factors. The prevalence of goitre was 17.2% in the studied sample. It was significantly more in the 4th grade schoolchildren than in the 2nd grade children (pA de novo missense mutation in the SCN1A gene causes severe childhood absence epilepsy in an Italian family. Dravet syndrome is a severe, early onset form of epileptic encephalopathy with onset in early infancy and is genetically heterogeneous. Mutations in the SCN1A gene have been found to be responsible for the disease, but at least 20% of Dravet syndrome cases are genetically uncharacterized. In this paper, we describe the clinical, genetic, and neuroimaging findings in a large Italian family with Dravet syndrome, which we have screened for de novo mutations in SCN1A by Sanger sequencing. Three siblings with severe Dravet syndrome were found to carry a de novo mutation in SCN1A, the p.Thr901Met
