Most cameras and digital SLRs shoot JPEG files. For photographic uses, JPEG files are usually fine for smaller prints (up to about 8 x 10 inches) because they are small and fit into a computer easily. Because they are compatible with both Macintosh and Windows operating systems, JPEG files can be transferred to a computer from a camera easily, and they take up a lot less space on a computer's hard drive than a RAW file would. When a photographer captures an image, the camera immediately converts the image from the RAW file into a JPEG file, which is how most photographers get their images on the computer. Often, the photographer will edit the image in post-processing and will use the JPEG format for the final version. The following list of advantages and disadvantages explains why photographers should stick to JPEG files: Advantages of JPEG * High quality * Small file size * Compatible with many image editing programs * Less storage space needed * Compatible with most desktop operating systems, including Windows and Macintosh * Quick to transfer * Compatible with most digital cameras Disadvantages of JPEG * Very large file sizes * JPEG files are not as sophisticated as RAW files * Slow to transfer from camera to computer * Not compatible with all desktop operating systems * Cannot be edited as easily as a RAW file * Not suitable for archiving Advantages of RAW * High quality * A photograph's RAW file retains the total data in the original image file * Faster to transfer to computer * Compatible with all desktop operating systems * Much better quality for large prints * Can be edited easily * Not typically associated with being manipulated * Can be archived Disadvantages of RAW * Raw files are very large. * Raw files are not as compatible with common software as JPEG files. * Raw file formats cannot be included in a common database. * Raw files are typically more difficult to transfer from camera to

Q: How to use the function of a framework in another framework? I am building an app in Swift 3 using React-Native. I use the react-native-maps package, in order to use the Google Maps API in my app. I have imported the package in the AppDelegate.swift file. import GoogleMaps However, I also use the firebase real time database in my app. So far I have to use Firebase on my own. In my AppDelegate.swift file, I also imported the Firebase pod. import Firebase This causes some issues, because I need to use the function: FIRDatabase.database().reference() So, I have attempted to import both the react-native-maps pod, as well as the Firebase pod in the AppDelegate.swift file. import Firebase import ReactNativeMaps Even if I add each of the pods individually, the AppDelegate.swift file gets completely empty because there is no reference to any of the pods. Is there any way to import the pod of the react-native-maps package in the AppDelegate.swift file in order to use the methods of the react-native-maps package in the AppDelegate.swift file, and also in the rest of the files where it is imported? A: Did you read the docs? Here you can see that you have to use a separate module for your AppDelegate. Check the next example for a complete application: // AppDelegate.swift import UIKit import React import RNTMeters @UIApplicationMain class AppDelegate: UIResponder, UIApplicationDelegate { var window: UIWindow? func application(_ application: UIApplication, didFinishLaunchingWithOptions launchOptions: [UIApplication.LaunchOptionsKey: Any]?) -> Bool { // Override point for customization after application launch. // Add any view controller, or view, as a child view controller here. //
