I have tried to reinstall the software and reinstall the authentication of my new computer but the error persists. A: What is the "product should be archived" error? It means you haven't registered a serial key yet. Go to serial keys in the product Select product you want to register a serial key Click registration from the menu Enter your serial key and click register Done. If this doesn't work, there may be some faulty serial keys in your installed serial keys. I would recommend, instead of using the key in the iso file, use the key in the Serial keys If you did that already, then make sure the iso has been installed on the computer you want to use to register the key (most likely if you got a key from me. I would send the iso to you). If that doesn't work, try deleting all the existing serial keys, and adding the key again (don't use an ISO file, use the one in Serial keys). Q: Rails request from /assets/images/blah.jpeg is missing the .jpeg extension I'm working on a new Rails project. When I try accessing an image file from /assets/images, it is coming back to me as a 404 but there is no jpeg appended at the end of the file path For example I expect to see something like But I get A: The asset pipeline will include the.jpeg extension if you do not specify otherwise. In your case you probably did not 3da54e8ca3
