The aim of this study was to estimate the recurrence rate of differentiated thyroid carcinomas (DTCs) after low-dose radioiodine (RAI) (131I) therapy and the impact of recurrence on survival. The study was a retrospective analysis of 91 patients with DTCs in the period from January, 2006 to December, 2008. Follow-up lasted from 6 to 75 months. Patients were divided into two groups according to the administered dose of radioactive iodine (131I). Group 1 consisted of 43 patients, while group 2 consisted of 48 patients. The efficacy of radioiodine (131I) therapy in patients with DTCs was assessed based on the TNM and risk-classification criteria. The incidence of recurrence was assessed in group 1 and group 2 (the group after the one-dose administration of radioactive iodine, 131I) patients. The distribution of patients according to the investigated subgroups was as follows: subgroup 1 (n=43, 49.4%) - received an oral application of therapeutic 131I dose of 300 microg in week 1 and 3000 microg in week 2 and/or radioiodine, (131I) I-131, in mCi dose on the remaining days of the week; and subgroup 2 (n=48, 50.6%) - received as-
