Q: Receive POST data to PHP Page via AJAX and save to database Hello I am just trying to implement a chat function into my website. I have been researching but everything I found had a different way. My idea was to have a button that when clicked the user will receive the input and then the site will send the data to a php page. The php page will save the data into mySQL database and return something back to the user. Here is my code: `$(document).ready(function() { $('#btn').click(function() { var name = $('#name').val(); $.post('php/contact.php', name, function(data) { alert(data); }); }); });` SUBMIT Now I am worried what I am doing is wrong. I am doing everything right but I dont know how to receive the data. EDIT: My php code is as follows: A: You should modify your php code like this
