This Easy Invoicing UK for MS Access demo provides an example of how to use the software to manage a small business.

Your Invoices The invoices are sorted into client accounts. Each invoice is assigned a journal with an active or archived status. Invoices can be issued directly to a client, or to a 'buddy' account. 'Buddies' can be used for both partners in a business or other situations. Invoices can be issued in 5 formats; D, T, A, C or X. The software can even create its own formats; for example, X2 will generate a X formatted invoice and an X2 formatted invoice at the same time. Format X2 is easier to read than format X. Format C is easier to read than formats D and T. Format A has a 'delivery note' section for each invoice. Format T is similar to an X formatted invoice, but the layout is different.

Products and Services The products and services section contains all the 'products' and 'services' in your database. Each product or service has it's own record. Products can be combined to create a single product. For example, if you sell a book and a magazine, you could group them together as a single product. A customer is charged for a product, not the number of products that they are using. The products are split into 4 categories; magazines, books, CD's and TV's. Each product can have an image assigned to it, and the image can be a link to another page on your website. Each product can have a 'standard price' or a 'special price'. It can also have a default price or a price that you have set. If you set a price that is different from the 'standard price', you can set the 'special price'.

Deliveries Deliveries are entered by simply clicking on the delivery option. A delivery can either be printed or emailed, or both. The delivery can contain either an address, or a delivery note. A delivery note can be added to each invoice. If you print invoices, the invoice can be printed with a tear off reply slip on the back. If you use a delivery note, the invoices will always have a delivery note, but the delivery notes can be left on a hard copy or an email.

Payments Payments can be added and sorted by a variety of criteria. You can search for payments by date, or you can sort them by amount. You can sort the payments by client, date, status, type, product, invoice, delivery note, description, client, amount or user. You can even search for payments by client or invoice. If the '
