“They’re so ridiculous,” said Sara Paskowitz, a lawyer in Malibu who works with clients who were ordered to move out of their homes to make way for the pipeline. “They use the threat of eminent domain to go after a grandma.” “This is just too much,” a friend of Paskowitz’s said as the two drove along the beach, looking for any sign of crews, even if they could see only footprints in the sand. Eminent domain, a power granted to states and local governments, allows the government to take private property for a public purpose — typically to build a highway, a new prison or to improve a water system. Courts have long held that the government may not use the power in a way that is discriminatory or to benefit one private party at the expense of another. Yet in recent years, there has been a renewed push by federal and state governments to use the power to approve construction of pipelines, and a number of recent court cases have upheld the legal right of governments to do so. They have made it easier for the government to condemn property, often at the request of big energy companies or developers who say that pipelines are needed. In the case of the Keystone XL pipeline, the Obama administration has said the pipeline is needed to carry oil from Alberta, Canada, to refineries on the Gulf Coast and to help fight climate change by reducing emissions of greenhouse gases that contribute to global warming.Q: How do you pass a button id to the javascript function? I have tried for a while now and finally ask for help. I am trying to make a countdown timer on a page, and have it so that on clicking a button it will start the count down. My question is how do I make it that when the button is clicked, the Javascript function will find that div with the id timer, and start the countdown. A: Just use the id="timer" as a selector when running the timer. var timer = document.getElementById("timer"); timer.innerHTML = "15"; The.innerHTML is used to change the content of the div. EDIT:

A: You can try downloading the file and inspecting the text to see what it says. Unfortunately if you're just going to use it as a URL, you'll need to know the extension. I don't see any reason for that to be anything other than a zip file. In order to get the file working, you're probably going to need to download it, and then extract it - and you can do that by using a tool like 7-zip.

Q: Toggle/Switch of Android battery status My laptop battery always goes to 95% usage of battery. Is there any way to change it to 100% always? If possible: How can I toggle/switch my smartphone battery status in one click? A: The simplest method of using software to control power dissipation is to configure an operating system (Linux, Windows, Mac OS, etc.) to save energy during idle periods. All operating systems do that by default, but there may be an option to disable it. So you can start it off with your device running normally and then see if it is disabled when the device is idle and then try to enable it. The obvious application is for your laptop, where it can help you save energy during idle periods. But if you like, there are other options for smartphones and tablets that can also save energy while being idle. me to tell our story." The IJ's opinion is ambiguous as to whether he considered Al Ubaidi's evidence of changed country conditions. Nevertheless, the IJ's opinion indicates that he did consider it. The IJ stated that "applicant does not have documentation for the situations in his country" and, on the issue of violence, stated that "the applicant does not have documentary proof." -10- Furthermore, it appears that Al Ubaidi bears the burden of demonstrating a genuine fear of persecution. The IJ stated, "[d]espite the respondent's assertion that he was persecuted and tortured by the government of Chad, the Court has determined that there is no evidence whatsoever to support respondent's assertion." Moreover, the IJ noted that "the 3e33713323
