He moved to San Francisco in 1949, where he worked as a professional musician and composer, and as an English teacher. His first book, LaTorre: The Story of a Negro Composer, was published in 1950. The book was called a “celebrated exception” to the American literary establishment’s condemnation of black literature and was named one of the best books of 1951 by The New York Times. After the success of the book, James was allowed to become a part of the New York literary scene. As a musician, he played with New York City’s Ballets Africains, and helped to write the music for the film Black Boy, in which he also portrayed the lead role. He was also on the faculty of the NYC’s Jazz Department as a teacher of writing and music. James helped to found the National Association of Negro Musicians, and was its first chairman. In addition to The Story of a Negro Composer, he wrote The Trouble with Tommy; Mama’s Man; Queen of Broadway; The Spooks in the Music; Black Man’s Burden; New Sounds in Black and White; and The Songs Our Feet Sing.
