Mungkin untuk berbagai alasan,merupakan product dari program untuk klant eksternal dan klant intern di negara kita.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a particle detector for detecting particles such as bacteria, viruses and the like which adhere to a sample container, and a particle counting apparatus. More particularly, the present invention relates to a particle detector and a particle counting apparatus which can accurately count the amount of particles adhering to the surface of the sample container, even though the sampling area of the sample container is large. 2. Description of the Related Art Conventionally, a culture system is used for the detection of a pathogenic microorganism in a patient's blood, the detection of a pathogenic microorganism adhering to a sample container, such as a blood sample container, and the like. In such a culture system, a sample container containing a sample is adhered to the sample holder of a culture vessel, and the culture vessel is inoculated with culture media. Then, the pathogenic microorganism of the sample is cultured for a certain period, and then the culture media is removed from the culture vessel, and the culture vessels are stored at a predetermined temperature. The culture media remaining in the culture vessel are measured, and the pathogenic microorganism of the sample can be detected by comparing the measurement result with a predetermined threshold. In such a culture system, in order to obtain a pathogenic microorganism count value having a high level of reliability, the sample container (mainly, a blood sample container) needs to be a clean environment, such that no bacteria, viruses and the like adhering to the inner surface of the sample container are left. However, in reality, the handling (for example, the transfer and placement of the sample container) of the sample container, until the measurement of the culture media is carried out, sometimes involves a 3da54e8ca3
