As MRSA prevalence continues to rise globally, it is important to assess it in other settings, as well as among the general population. We aimed to study the colonization rate and risk factors for infection in hospitalized outpatients. We performed nasal and anal swab cultures and MRSA screening in 45 hospitalized outpatients. Patients were classified in two groups based on their occupation. The overall colonization rate was 55%. The most common site was nasal cavity (58%), followed by the anus (44%) and the perianal region (44%). The nasal colonization rate was higher in patients in nursing/caretakers (85%) than in any other occupation (47-63%), and the colonization rate was significantly lower in patients wearing a mask (31.7%) than in patients without a mask (94.7%). Patients working in the ward were more likely to be colonized (OR 6.9, 95% CI: 1.8-25.6), than patients working in the outpatient clinics. Colonization was more common in patients with perianal abscesses (77.8%), whereas it was less common in patients with intra-abdominal infection (33.3%). Our study showed the colonization rate of MRSA in hospitalized outpatients was quite high. Lowering the infection risk for MRSA would benefit not only patients but also hospital staff members.Q: import csv into pandas DataFrame without ending up with empty strings When I import a csv file into a pandas DataFrame that I've used before, the column values are all replaced with empty strings (''). For example, if my CSV file has a first column named 'c1', a second column named 'c2' and a third column named 'c3', and my DataFrame has empty string values in the 'c2' and 'c3' columns, then when I import it, it becomes c1 c2 c3 True
