below. that the great majority of the waste remaining on the premises was well within the statutory definition of recyclable material. The definition of "recyclable material" is the most important aspect of the application of the statute, and it is the duty of this court to construe the provisions of the statute strictly so that tax immunity is not granted to property used for the disposal of waste and scrap when the statute requires that they be recycled.

(Emphasis added.)

18 It is true that the substance of this decision was also later applied in the Tax Court in determining whether or not the Department of Interior's claim as to the "recyclable" character of the discarded material was "clear error."

See, W. Realty Co., P5 T.C. (No. 15,611) (1978).

The Tax Court

properly was concerned with the substance of the Department of Interior's claims and the court properly held that the Department had not established by a preponderance of the evidence that the discarded material was "recyclable" within the meaning of the statute. The Tax Court did not find the Department's claims to be "clear error" or its claims to be "negligent" but, rather, simply held that the taxpayer had failed to disprove the "clear error" of the Department's claims by a preponderance of the evidence. See,

W. Realty Co., P5
T.C. (No. 15,611)
(1978). 19 We do
not view this decision as being inconsistent with our opinion in Darr
v. Herman, 618
F.2d 592 (9th Cir.
1980). The issue
of whether the Commissioner's determination of the "recyclable"
character of the
discarded material

was "clear error"
was not before the court. Therefore,
the issue before
the court was whether the taxpayer failed to prove that the
discarded material
was in fact
"recyclable" and,
for the reasons
stated, the court
merely held that the taxpayer
