“We are very excited about the unique opportunity to participate in a Motion Capture athlete game that will aid us in the development of our video games, as well as allowing us to share this technology with players,” said Mike Sorensen, Executive Producer of FIFA at EA SPORTS. “By working with the incredible athletes in our sports collection and key motion capture specialists, we will be able to learn and apply this knowledge into the future of our games.” When FIFA 13 was released, this technology was a cutting-edge advancement in the video game industry. Now, a decade later, we’re thrilled to see this innovation come to life in Fifa 22 Activation Code. For the Player The introduction of HyperMotion Technology is a significant step forward in the evolution of FIFA and video game sports games. The NBA, NFL, MLB, NHL, MLS and FIBA each brought their athletes in motion capture suits to Washington D.C. to take part in the creation of game content in FIFA 22. Players were captured in motion for one pass, one tackle, one shot at goal, one through ball and one dribble. Over 30 different passing and dribbling techniques, along with multiple variations of each, were captured to create the best football physics and gameplay. The best part is that players didn’t have to do anything at all. “FIFA 22 HyperMotion Technology will allow all players to feel the thrill of being in the action, without needing to change a single thing. They are able to get the feel of the game through the players’ movements in real-life as they perform at high intensity, which will give them a better sense of the gameplay and allow them to make the right decisions in the game,” said Alex Quayle, Senior Producer on FIFA. One of the other challenges in capturing motion on a person is controlling the amount of detail being captured. This required a sophisticated way to catch the movements of the players without having any excess in the motion capture data. EA Sport Motion tech department worked closely with the players in the motion capture suits, mastering the movement of each player in the action. We’ve developed a proprietary algorithm that creates a weighting based on the movement of each player in the game. And this allows the game to pick up only what is essential – key moves that occur only in a handful of game situations. Player experiences are unique to each player, so instead of using an athlete
