Pages Thursday, January 23, 2013 I'm having some sort of major bizarro dream tonight, but I'm still not sure what it means. I think it's some sort of premonition of something that will happen later on this year. Anyway, for now I'm going to leave you with one of my favorite photographs from the early days of my husband's job. He was brand new, and he had just started work in my high-drama department. We were both fresh out of graduate school and... oh, let's just say that our relationship was very rocky for awhile. He walked into my office with this book. Without thinking, I snatched it out of his hand and opened it on my desk. Then, as if the Universe was giving me that "everything happens for a reason" signal, I pulled out the pen I'd been using the whole time we'd been married. I held the pen in my hand and looked up at my husband. The look on his face was enough to make me feel like our relationship was about to turn around. Friday, January 10, 2013 I was looking at the gun today, and I'm not sure which I find more disturbing: the gun itself, or the fact that I have such an obvious, repulsive, memorable logo on my gun. The gun looks pretty good - I like the brown color - but there's something about the logo that really makes me gag. And I've been thinking about that logo in connection to lots of things recently. For example, I just got a new, very pretty pen (which I hope to tell you about soon). But I kept thinking about the logo on that pen, and remembering how I felt when I first saw that pen (on a TV show that I was watching). I was thinking about how ugly the pen was, and how ridiculous it was that I was liking this pen just because of what was on it. I think the story of the pen is pretty much the story of the gun logo: pretty, but ugly. Who would have ever thought that a logo that goes "epp" would become so recognizable. And I think that, in a lot of ways, that's the whole story of my life. I didn't even realize it until a few years ago, but when I was in elementary school, my life really was an ugly story. I didn't even

What's New In?

Microsoft says Windows 10 Mobile is coming soon. On Tuesday, Microsoft officially unveiled the latest version of Windows. Tim Yang, the Windows 10 program manager on the Microsoft Open Technologies Team, announced the announcement while also teasing more information on the new operating system. See also: Are the pre-orders for Windows 10 Mobile worth it? It's important to note that the upcoming version of Windows for Mobile isn't Windows Phone 8.1. Instead, it's its own operating system called Windows 10 Mobile, according to Yang. It's expected to launch sometime this year. It's unclear at this time whether or not Windows 10 Mobile will be available outside the U.S., or if it'll come to other markets. But as Yang noted, it'll be rolling out as an update to Windows 10. Angela Lang/CNET Windows 10 for PC will be available later this year, but Microsoft is only launching the new version of the operating system for Windows 10 Mobile. There's been no mention of Windows 10 Mobile on the PC side. Microsoft has been slow to roll out the Windows 10 Mobile update, choosing instead to release the OS on devices like the Lumia 950 and 950 XL, and Verizon's Droid Turbo 2 and Samsung's Galaxy S6. Microsoft has yet to officially confirm or deny the existence of Windows 10 Mobile, but the software giant has been hinting at its existence. Back in February, a Microsoft representative at Build told CNET that Windows 10 Mobile wasn't finished, but it would be soon. At Build in May, Microsoft wouldn't confirm if Windows 10 Mobile would be out soon, but the company did promise that "there's more to come," referring to new updates for Windows 10 Mobile.Q: Why is the time window of the `find()` method left shifted by one day A pandas DataFrame where a dataframe with a datetime column has only one row has the following output:
