This "Technology" is only shown on teams who have been deemed the top tier, and not the second and third tiers. The data from the top level is used to power the AI of all the lower teams, on the field for the duration of the players' careers. When you play as a higher-tier team, then you will get the hyper-automations. The overall depth, quality, and individuality is the highest this game has ever been, and is something that is built into the DNA of FIFA from the start. The best AI in the history of FIFA, in my opinion, and amongst other best I have ever played. This is my opinion and, of course, it comes down to personal preference. It's not just how it looks (it actually does look as if the players have their faces, with expressions) either, but the depth and quality of the AI. It will take years before this game is compatible, even in Legacy (but as of now, it's not compatible with legacy mode), so it's impossible to say. The gameplay is superb, though. I'm pretty sure the top team in the game will be able to play by themselves with no problems and not have the engine overheat. The licenses are probably the best in history, all you have to do is to get a license to play, and you will have the best players in the world at your disposal. It would be cool to see the pitch shift when you are in the replays and such. It's so high end, it's really well balanced, I haven't been this into the game in a long time, I'm not sure how people expect it not to be smooth, I've seen people get frustrated when there is lag on first person view, but that's just my opinion. And it's smooth when it's on the pitch. I haven't experienced any of the issues you have mentioned, I have played it for a few hours (on an actual FIFA 20 cheat, just to show that I haven't been bugged), and I only have 1.5 hard drives atm. So far I can confirm it's VERY smooth, and it's very true to the actual game. Alley Cat is the highest tier there is, probably the best in the world
