A thief who snuck into a barn at a farm in Michigan, cooked and ate a deer, had to be cut out of the carcass by farm staff. According to WLNS the incident happened at the Overton farm near Alba, Michigan, in August. Staff members reportedly discovered the deer hanging in the barn when they arrived at the scene to investigate. They said it was previously buried under a pile of horse feed.

According to WLNS, the head of the farm, Dr. Abubakar Overton, said when his staff arrived to check the barn, the deer was left to rot while they were gone. He said: 'Once they went to look around they found it, it was probably dead for about a month. 'We cut them out of there, they gave it a try and a big hole in the neck, it was totally cooked.' An attorney for the farm said the deer had been left to rot while the owners were away. He said that it had not been buried in the barn, adding: 'This was not animal cruelty. This was the most humane way to dispose of the carcass.' The farm, owned by Dr. Overton, is operated by his brother, Carl Overton.
