type consist of a carrier equipped with a sealing element which extends through a wall of the carrier.
The sealing element can be deflected into contact with the sealing surface of the carrier or, as desired, into a clearance which is open to the interior of the carrier. In order to guarantee a high-quality sealing action, the sealing element is pressed against the wall of the carrier with a pressing force which is very high in relation to the wall thickness. For this purpose, the end face of the sealing element has a thickening which is of approximately 50 to 70% of the wall thickness. While the sealing element is in contact with the wall of the carrier, the sealing element is sealingly connected with the wall, for example, by a clamping effect. In the case of deflection of the sealing element into a clearance, a seal is formed by clamping, which seal is separate from the sealing element. A seal of this type is described in German Patent Specification DE-PS 36 08 263. The sealing element described in DE-PS 36 08 263 is formed by a C-ring. The seal of DE-PS 36 08 263 is formed in that the end face of the C-ring
