Monoclonal antibodies to gangliosides and related glycolipids. I. Development of the assay for detection of human IgM and IgG autoantibodies to GM1 and GD1a with the use of enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay techniques. A multiplex ELISA technique for detection of antibodies to GM1 and GD1a gangliosides has been developed. The technique is based on the use of three peroxidase-labelled monoclonal antibodies, namely G23, C11 and C20, directed against GM1, GD1a and GD1b gangliosides, respectively. For each antigen a monospecific ELISA system was developed. The GM1 ELISA system detects IgM and IgG autoantibodies in patients' sera and, for comparison, can be used as a "second-line" assay for the detection of anti-GM1 antibody activity in the serum of patients with rheumatoid arthritis. In contrast, the GD1a ELISA system is only for the detection of IgM autoantibodies. For the GD1a ELISA system, the limit of sensitivity is 0.1 units IgM/ml, the recovery of both antigen and antibody is 80-95% and there is no cross-reactivity of the antibodies to other gangliosides. With this ELISA technique, it has been shown that as a fraction of a group of 50 sera with clinical signs of autoimmune neuropathy the percentage of sera containing IgM autoantibodies to GD1a, GM1 and to n.l.a. non-GM1 gangliosides ranged between 2 and 3%, between 26 and 32% and between 3 and 6%, respectively.Q:

When viewing the source of a table using the NetBeans Refactoring features, NetBeans hides all columns that have a null value in their row. This includes columns with type such as CLOB and BLOB. This is causing our apps to not function properly because the hidden columns are not being loaded by Hibernate when Hibernate is reading a table. When using VisualVM to view the table structure, I get the following error message: Cannot get connection for DriverManager (org.h2.DriverManager) This appears to be related to the driver jdbc.h2.url property not being set properly. I am not sure what is causing this. A: The problem was caused by the software updater package manager (which the Oracle 11g Express Edition installer appears to also be calling) being used. Removing the update manager for Ubuntu fixed the issue. Thanks for the help! Q: After updating phonegap base to 3.4.0, AndroidManifest.xml file is missing! I was trying to build a native Android application using PhoneGap. After all, I couldn't see the default icon in the application settings (app). Then I used adb to view the file and found out that the AndroidManifest.xml file is missing! Even if I add manually, it is just invalid XML. I searched all the site, but I couldn't find a solution that is valid for PhoneGap 3.4.0. A: You need to add the meta-data in the AndroidManifest.xml file. AndroidManifest.xml should have the d0c515b9f4
