Q: Simple POST Request in node.js, Firebase I'm trying to make a simple POST request to Firebase from node.js using the request library. However, when sending a request, the server returns error: POST 404 (Not Found) My app.js is as following: var express = require('express'); var app = express(); var request = require('request'); var path = require('path'); var moment = require('moment'); app.use(express.static('public')); var firebase = require('firebase'); var config = require('./config'); var firestore = firebase.firestore(); app.post('/error', function(req, res){ var docRef = firestore.collection('messages').doc(); if(!docRef) { docRef = firestore.collection('messages').doc(); } docRef.set({ message: req.body.message, user: req.body.user, datetime: req.body.datetime }); res.send('Your messages have been posted'); }); app.get('/', function(req, res){ res.sendFile(path.join(__dirname + '/index.html')); }); app.listen(3000, function() { console.log('listening on *:3000'); }); config.js is what I copied from Firebase's website and contains client ID and API key. Can anyone give me a hint on how to solve this issue? Thanks. A: You aren't accepting

Effect of exercise training on plasma concentration of endothelin-1 and left ventricular mass in patients with aortic stenosis. There are multiple lines of evidence suggesting that endothelin-1, a potent vasoconstrictor, is involved in pathophysiological processes of the cardiovascular system. Therefore, we examined whether exercise training would affect plasma endothelin-1 and left ventricular mass in patients with aortic stenosis. Blood samples from 23 patients with aortic stenosis were taken before (Pre), immediately after (0 min) and 2 h (2 h) after a maximal cardiopulmonary exercise test in order to examine the plasma endothelin-1 concentrations. The left ventricular mass was determined by echocardiography. The plasma endothelin-1 concentrations after training significantly decreased in patients with aortic stenosis as compared to Pre (Pre: 2.8 +/- 0.8 pg/ml, 2 h: 2.0 +/- 1.2 pg/ml). The plasma endothelin-1 concentrations after training were significantly higher in patients with aortic stenosis than in healthy controls (healthy: 1.7 +/- 0.7 pg/ml, 2 h: 2.0 +/- 1.2 pg/ml). In the healthy controls, the plasma endothelin-1 concentrations were not significantly changed after training. However, the left ventricular mass in the healthy controls was significantly decreased after training as compared to Pre (Pre: 186 +/- 25 gm/m2, 2 h: 186 +/- 28 gm/m2). These results suggest that exercise training might decrease the plasma endothelin-1 concentration and the left ventricular mass in patients with aortic stenosis. it is the end of the day, the end of the week, or even the end of the month, that is the time when I look forward to that morning. I can't put a price tag on it, and I can't depend on it. When the end comes, I know the start will bring new insights and new possibilities. What if, when the time comes, you discover that there is nothing new and there is nothing better? It will be the same as before. Think about it: When you die, you will be dead, and you will be dead again, after having been dead, of course. If there is nothing new, then there is nothing good. If everything stays the same, you will be
